

2017 Annual Report

Researchers who come into our facilities to use our archives and library to search for the stories of Montgomery County examine. Visitors that come to see an object or photograph in our exhibits are also looking for that story in a different way, but a story nonetheless. The same is true for all of you who have attended any of our classes, workshops, or lectures over the years. Every day at the Historical Society of Montgomery I am reminded that all of these stories are important and we strive to help all of our members and visitors find their stories.

Sometimes, these are stories of prominent people and successful businesses. There are also stories that illustrate how important Montgomery County was in the nation. There are stories about talented artists and scientists. There are stories about wars, about politics, and about power.

But there are also many stories which we help people discover that are far more personal. Helping someone to discover that their great-grandfather tried his hand at being a locksmith for five years before giving it up and going to work the rest of his life as a barber is a rewarding accomplishment. These stories can be hard to find, but our talented staff and volunteers will gladly help you along your research path.

The best stories of all tend to be those of transformation. The Historical Society of Montgomery County has embarked upon the creation of a new strategic plan based on an inclusive process that will seek guidance from the community to determine a sustainable path for our future. It offers us an opportunity to assess the community's evolving needs and to determine how we can help meet them. We hope that our story will be one of transformation and we thank all of you for helping us create that story.

Contributions in 2017

Donations to the Historical Society of Montgomery County are a very important way for members and friends to show their support. The Annual Fund and other contributions enable us to do special projects, support outreach, ongoing organization and preservation of our collections, and Historic Montgomery Cemetery. Bequests ensure the long-term stability of the organization by providing funds that can be invested and grow with us over many years.

We are grateful for all of the support which helps us further our mission.

Thank You !
